

A mystery story about a crime by Karina 8c

It was a usual evening for the singer Jordan Carter in the recording studio with his great friend and producer Pierre Bourne. Pierre was perfecting the melody for a new song on his computer, Jordan was recording the vocals in the booth. Suddenly, they heard a loud glass shattering noise coming from the hallway. Pierre and Jordan went out of the room quietly to see what had happened. They immediately noticed the shattered window at the end of the hallway, and the other studio room's door was wide open. Pierre quickly took a microphone stand from the studio, where they had been before, as a weapon for defense. Then, he opened the door wider to see what's going on while Jordan was behind him. No one was in the room, but Jordan noticed that a keyboard and a Launchpad were gone. Pierre called the cops and reported a break in. The cops and a detective came to the building after a couple of minutes and after some investigating found out who's guilty of the crime. The robber was arrested the same evening and the stolen instruments were returned to the owner.
